Installation Project, Quiet Rooms and Media Walls, Edinburgh

Heartwood Installations were selected as the installer of choice to meet Lloyd's specific requirement at New Uberior House and Port Hamilton in Edinburgh. Lloyds were looking to create various collaborative spaces, using Connection configurable room systems in different configurations across the two buildings. Each contained various media walls, writable walls and acoustic panels allowing for varied activity-based spaces within.

The configurations were tricky and exact, with a need to get the work done efficiently at the first time of asking. Any errors would have delayed the opening of the space. Heartwood undertook a significant pre-planning exercise, getting our team on-site early to designate "on the floor" layouts to ensure the correct configuration prior to the installation process beginning. Our team then diligently installed the rooms in sequence, with our Installation Manager sense-checking the work at each agreed assessment point. The result was successfully built rooms at the first time of asking, each with a fully functioning media wall.

Client Feedback

"A previous contractor had struggled with the installation of this product, and Heartwood worked both more quickly and more accurately than any team we have brought in before"
